KELLY'S INDUSTRIALS.

Coming on to Washington on Fast Freight Schedule.

NOT A REGIMENT OF TRAMPS.

General Kelly Makes a Speech to Public Officials at Cheyenne in Which He Pledges Observance of Law—Master Workman Sovereign on the Crusaders.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., April 14.—The Industrial Army arrived here late yesterday afternoon, with banners flying and men cheering. The men were not permitted to stop within the city limits, but engines were changed at Cabana, five miles west of the city, and the train of seventy-five cars was afterwards run through to East Cheyenne, where but a brief stop was made to take on a supply of provisions, including 1,200 loaves of bread and five beeves furnished by the city, enough to feed the men until North Platte, Neb., is reached. The railroad officials decided to push the army right through Nebraska on fast freight schedule, reaching Omaha this afternoon. General Kelly and his men expected to go via Denver, but the Union Pacific refused to run the train south. General Kelly said:

"I had hoped to call on Governor Waite and thank him personally for his expression of sympathy. But it is impossible. We must hurry on to Washington as rapidly as possible while we have the opportunity."

To local railroad, city and county officials and citizens who went out to visit the [illegible] camp General Kelly said in a speech:

"I am confident the army will accomplish its purpose. [illegible]. We found six tramps among us on reaching Green River, but they were left with the local authorities. Every man of us has taken a personal obligation not to violate any law of the land, and we are going down to Washington to petition congress for deserved relief. California has kept these men and 15,000 more for over two years, and we believe it is now the government's duty to give us employment. We ask relief for only a year or so, when we shall be able to do for ourselves. We do not propose to destroy property, or menace congressmen who will not listen to us.

"This industrial movement is separate from Coxey's army. He has nothing to do with us. On reaching Washington we will call upon Congressman Pence, of Colorado, and Delegate Rawlins, of Utah, to advise them in our behalf. The best of discipline prevails, and the men are [illegible] to obey their officers."

MR. SOVEREIGN'S VIEWS.

He Fears That the Coxey Movement Portends an Insurrection.

BOSTON, April 14.—Grand Master Workman Sovereign of the Knights of Labor is here. In an interview with an Associated Press reporter he said:

"The general condition of the workingmen throughout the country is not improved, despite the statements of the press to the contrary. I expect no relief from either of the old parties, and if they ever [illegible]"

In speaking of Coxey's army the labor leader [illegible]:

[illegible]

Captured a B. and O. Train.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 14.—Vice-President Peabody, of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern railroad, sent the following to Governor Matthews: "About fifty [illegible] captured our freight [illegible] are on their way east. We have advices that about 300 more men are camped east of St. Louis and will probably undertake to repeat the operation. What protection have you in your state?" Governor Matthews replied: "The Indiana authorities will protect the [illegible] and property of persons within her borders if called upon to do so." The governor has heard nothing further from the Baltimore and Ohio officials, but has noted the press dispatches to the effect that tramps and recruits for Coxey's army are in camp along railway lines west of Indiana's border. He is considering the situation that may be thrust upon him, if large bodies of men come over into Indiana.

Coxey's Army in Maryland.

GRANTSVILLE, Pa., April 14.—The army of the commonweal passed the state line at [illegible] o'clock yesterday morning on the tramp over the Alleghenies from Addison to this backwood hamlet. The [illegible] across the line was made to the tune of "My Maryland." Three cheers were then given for the "grand old Keystone state," as Marshal Browne expressed it, with a [illegible] within [illegible]. The camp last night was in a [illegible] valley, with a stream coming through. [illegible]. The [illegible] of the army [illegible] the [illegible]. The camp [illegible] will be at Frostburg, [illegible], where [illegible] council has [illegible] for the [illegible]. At Cumberland, which will be reached tomorrow, their reception will be cordially enthusiastic, and [illegible] camping south.

Frye's Contingent in Illinois.

VANDALIA, Ills., April 14.—The first Californian regiment of the California division of the industrial army under the command of General Frye, arrived in Vandalia and camped on the western bank of the Okaw river, just east of the city. The army presents a destitute appearance. By an act of the city council provisions sufficient for two meals were provided them.

Swept Overboard and Lost.

BALTIMORE, April 14.—The officers of the steamship Alene, just arrived from Rotterdam, report that on her last voyage out Chief Engineer Thomas Ramsay was swept overboard and lost. He leaves a widow and family in Sunderland, England.

Irish Cricketers Coming Over.

PHILADELPHIA, April 14.—It is definitely announced that the Irish cricketers will come to this country next September under the auspices of the Belmont Cricket club of this city. The "Irish Gentlemen," as they are termed, will sail about Sept. 1, and play their first game in this country on Sept. 10. They will be captained by J. W. Meldon, who held a similar office in the team that came over two years ago. The visitors will probably play five games, one in New York city, one at Boston, and three in this city.

"Defense, Not Defiance."

LONDON, April 14.—The Prince of Wales, presiding last night at the festival dinner given at the Middlesex hospital, in a speech [illegible] to the [illegible] the government had decided to increase the navy. He added: "God forbid that it should imply any threat to other countries. It is just the reverse, for in order to keep peace we must be strong. I hope the motto of which our volunteers are so proud—that of 'defense, not defiance'—may ever be realized by the navy."

Opposing Massachusetts' Liquor Law.

BOSTON, April 14.—[illegible] of the new license law, which has reached its third reading in the Massachusetts house of representatives, begins to light the fact that if the law is passed a number of the best hotels and clubs in the city will be unable to secure new licenses to sell liquor. The discovery of this fact has started a strong movement in opposition to the bill. The new measure prohibits the sale of liquor within 400 feet of any school.

Prendergast Wants Seclusion.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Assassin Prendergast was again released from the jail dungeon yesterday, where he had been confined since last Tuesday, for viciously attacking a guard. He faithfully promises future good behavior, and begged for a cell by himself. He was assigned to a cell in "murderers' row," as he desired a place where curious visitors could not see him. In his new quarters he is far out of the range of curious gazers.

Reorganizing the Militia.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 14.—Governor Tillman has begun to dismiss from the military service of the state those companies which failed to respond to his call during the Darlington trouble. The reorganization of the militia of the state is going on steadily. Many new companies, which will in the future be loyal to the commander-in-chief, have been organized and ask to be mustered into service.

Father Phelan Weakens.

ST. LOUIS, April 14.—Father Phelan, editor of The Western Watchman, has at last signed the apology and retraction demanded for publishing a statement a few years ago that Catholic bishops had [illegible] Catholic newspapers. After the publication of this statement by Father Phelan Archbishop Kenrick issued a decree of condemnation, which is now withdrawn.

To Investigate Secretary Hayes.

COLUMBUS, O., April 14.—The coal miners attached to the National Trades Assembly No. 135 comprising the [illegible] passed a resolution to investigate the charges preferred by their leader, John McBride, to the effect that John W. Hayes, general secretary of the Knights of Labor, is an enemy, in his official capacity, to the miners.

Liliuokalani Now Favors Annexation.

LONDON, April 14.—The Chronicle says that ex-Queen Liliuokalani has become convinced of the hopelessness of her case, and is said to be willing to advocate the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States, with a view to obtaining the pension which President Harrison advised. A petition to that effect is being prepared for submission to President Cleveland.

Cured of Rheumatism.

"I was troubled with pain and stiffness in one of my knees and I used external applications without any benefit. Reading a testimonial from a sufferer from rheumatism I concluded to buy a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and the stiffness and pain have left me, though I am in my 75th year."

JUDGE WILSON'S ARGUMENT.

It Surpassed Even the Brilliant Effort of Major Butterworth.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The great speech of Major Ben Butterworth in the Pollard-Breckinridge case was surpassed yesterday by the closing argument of Judge Jere Wilson, who began the final summary for the plaintiff. The audience which crowded in to hear him was in itself a compliment, and the attention which it gave him was notable [illegible].

Many of the most substantial members of the bar were glad to secure standing room all day, women were perched on the window sills, or pressed their backs against the walls willing to endure any discomfort for the sake of an opportunity to listen. [illegible] Mr. Wilson [illegible]. He had been a [illegible] of Breckinridge [illegible] the country [illegible] the Quaker [illegible] had so effectually [illegible] with the terrible ammunition which had been used against him [illegible] of his [illegible]. He attempted no oratory [illegible].

"The defense of Adam," was what he called Colonel Breckinridge's position, and [illegible] the path of womanly virtue she had been led by the man.

Judge Wilson talked slowly and deliberately. [illegible] Judge Wilson resumed his speech this morning, and will continue for an indefinite time. Then Judge Bradley will deliver his charge to the jury, and the trial will be ended when a verdict is announced.

The Supposed Dead Man Turned Up.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., April 14.—[illegible] Kees, of Philadelphia, [illegible] identified the body of a man found in the canal on Monday as that of her husband, Kees, who disappeared on Dec. 22. She ordered the body buried in Montgomery cemetery yesterday. Fifteen minutes before the funeral cortege was to move Mrs. Kees received a telegram announcing that Kees, the supposed dead man, was at home and well. The funeral was stopped, and now Undertaker [illegible] has a dead body and a [illegible] casket, besides a newly dug grave on his hands. The body will be buried at the poor house.

Philadelphia-New York Electric Road.

TRENTON, April 14.—The Central Jersey Traction company, which intends to establish an electric road between New York and Philadelphia, filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state yesterday. The work of construction is expected to begin at an early day. The road as planned will run to Jersey City, Newark, Orange, Plainfield, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Rahway, Princeton, Trenton, Camden and other towns from Philadelphia.

[illegible]

HARRODSBURG, Ky., April 14.—Two formerly wealthy citizens suicided yesterday by shooting owing to financial troubles. Thomas F. Alexander, a prominent stock dealer, was found dead in his room from a self-inflicted wound. The second suicide was Patrick H. [illegible] married last month. He took poison and left a note to his bride telling of his troubles. Both had held prominent political positions.

Davis a Senatorial Candidate.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Colonel George R. Davis, director general of the World's fair, announces his return to politics and his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States senator from Illinois. His opponents in the senatorial race are Senator Cullom, Congressman W. E. Mason and Hon. W. J. Campbell, national committeeman from this state.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

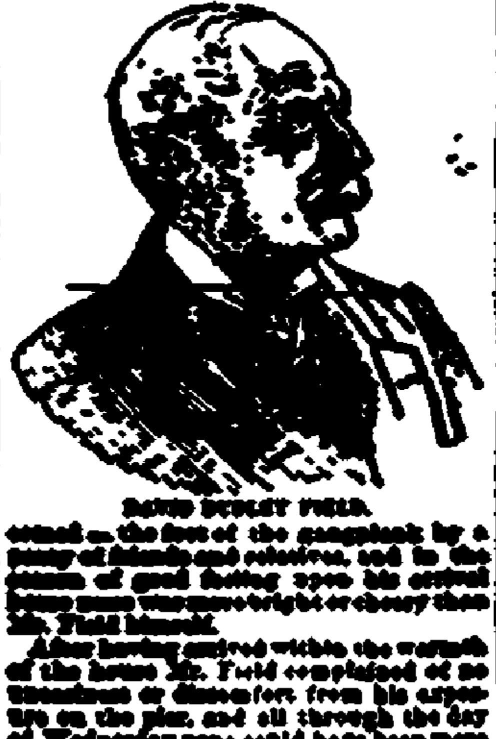
DUDLEY FIELD DEAD.

The Eminent Lawyer Succumbs to an Attack of Pneumonia.

AFTER ONLY ONE DAY'S ILLNESS.

The Most Noted of the Four Famous Field Brothers, Just Returned from a Trip to Italy, Suddenly Stricken in the Vigor of Old Age.

NEW YORK, April 14.—After an illness of exactly twenty-four hours David Dudley Field died yesterday of pneumonia, at the residence of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Dudley Field, 21 Gramercy park. When Mr. Field arrived on Wednesday from Genoa his face bore the color and other evidences of almost perfect health. He was welcomed at the foot of the gangplank by a party of friends and relatives, and in the stream of good feeling upon his arrival there were none more bright or cheery than Mr. Field himself.



DAVID DUDLEY FIELD.

After having arrived within the warmth of the house Mr. Field complained of no weakness or discomfort from his exposure on the pier, and all through the day of Wednesday none could have been more brightly entertaining than he. At 5 o'clock Thursday morning Mr. Field was seized with a congestive chill. Upon the arrival of the physician he detected immediately upon examination the fact that Mr. Field was threatened with pneumonia. Despite all that medical skill could do the disease rapidly developed until death came to his relief. There were only three persons with him when he expired—Mrs. Dudley Field, Miss Grace Field and Dr. Sayre.

The funeral services will take place at Calvary church tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The interment will take place at Stockbridge, Mass., on Monday.

A DISTINGUISHED CAREER.

He Had Been Known Throughout the Nation for Over Thirty Years.

A mind that began to take in lasting impressions amid the cannon thunders of the last war with Britain and of Napoleon's Waterloo campaign and retained a marvelous activity for more than four score years went out with the death of David Dudley Field. It is only six years ago that Mr. Field, long past the octogenarian mile post, collared a pompous looking young swell who had brutally assaulted a newsboy on the street and shook him as a terrier would a rat. "You are a disgrace to humanity," said he as he set the astonished dude on his feet. "Old as I am I can thrash you."

Mr. Field came from a family noted for its vigor. His profession was conducive to long life, and this is a period noted for busy octogenarians. Nevertheless a working lawyer at the verge of 90 has to be accounted for on other general principles. He was born at Haddam, Conn., a town at the foot of the Berkshire hills, in 1805. He was the oldest of ten children, and the most noted of four famous Field brothers.

David Dudley attended Williams college from his 17th to his 21st year and then began to study law at Albany. He was admitted to the New York city bar in 1828. New York had just cast off the institution of slavery and became a favorable refuge for runaway negroes from the south. The fugitive slave code was then in force, and Mr. Field first attracted attention in defending a negro against the operation of that law. The practice which gave him his great fame, however, did not begin until the civil war period, when he was 55 years old.

At the close of the war three Indianians, Bowles, Milligan and Horsey, were serving life sentences for conspiring to assist the Confederate prisoners at Indianapolis and otherwise hinder the prosecution of the war. They had been tried by a military commission in a state where ordinary courts were open and war did not prevail. Mr. Field argued that military commissions were illegal under the circumstances, and the United States supreme court ordered the men released. Afterward Mr. Field was counsel for the shareholders who ousted Fisk and Gould from the Erie railway. He also acted for the New York police in their controversy with Mayor Fernando Wood which nearly resulted in a local war. He appeared in the case of the state of Georgia against Grant and others as well.

Mr. Field's highest fame will rest upon his labors in the matter of jurisprudence. While a young man he began to write upon the necessity for reform and reorganization in the procedure codes. He continued the agitation from 1839 to 1857. He was appointed state commissioner on practice and pleading in the latter year and performed the chief part of the work in preparing a code of procedure which was used for twenty years. His penal code was also adopted and is now in force. His civil code, which attempts to codify the common law, he considered his greatest monument. It twice passed the legislature, but was vetoed.

Mr. Field resided in his Gramercy park [illegible]. He [illegible] in the habit of [illegible] which he kept up for forty years. He arose at 6 o'clock in the morning, and after a bath [illegible]. He walked four miles to and from the office, had an after dinner nap and slept seven to eight hours. This practice, added to temperance, cheerfulness and a way of always looking on the bright side of things, he thought, maintained his remarkable health and vigor.

The Nicaragua Canal.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Senator Morgan has completed and will present to the senate within the next day or two his report on the Nicaragua canal. The report is an able and exhaustive argument in favor of government supervision of the work and the dangers of allowing the enterprise to drift into English control.

THE STRIKING COKE WORKERS

They Succeed in Forcing Men from Work, but Without Bloodshed.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 14.—To the people of the southern districts of the Connellsville coke region yesterday was the most exciting day since the strike of the coke workers was inaugurated. From daybreak until late last night a force of 1,500 strikers marched in columns to martial music, and, flying the stars and stripes, marched up and down the country. While no conflict occurred, these men forced a suspension of work at every place they passed. So far as the south end of the region is concerned the strike is again a success.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., April 14.—The north end of the region is quiet, as it was all day yesterday. At the coke works the operators desire to run [illegible] half of the Connellsville region is concerned the strike is practically a thing of the past.

HARRISBURG, April 14.—Governor Pattison and party arrived in a special train over the Pennsylvania railroad. Last night the party was entertained at Pittsburg by the Duquesne club. The governor says there is absolutely nothing in the reports of calls for troops for the coke region. There is no real disturbance, and no troops will be sent unless called for by the sheriffs.

The Senate Without a Quorum.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The urgent deficiency bill was considered in the morning hour in the senate yesterday, without any action being taken upon it. At 2 o'clock the tariff bill was taken up, and Mr. Peffer finished his speech begun a week ago Thursday. His conclusion was that if there was one thing worse than the McKinley bill it was the senate tariff bill. He was followed by Senator Mitchell, of Oregon, who spoke for nearly four hours in opposition to the measure. The close of the day was marked by the introduction by Mr. Hill of a rule providing for the counting of a quorum. The senate was only in session an hour. Finding themselves without a quorum to act upon the new [illegible] rule, an adjournment was taken in order to give the Democrats an opportunity to go into caucus.

Brazilian Insurgents Driven Off.

LONDON, April 14.—A special dispatch to The Times from Montevideo says that advices have been received there from the city of Rio Grande do Sul showing that after severe fighting the insurgent forces that attacked the city succeeded in occupying the suburbs, the government troops falling back upon the city proper. On Tuesday reinforcements for the government troops arrived, whereupon Admiral de Mello ordered his forces to re-embark on the insurgent war ships. They left the harbor on Thursday. The insurgents then landed men at Castillo, which lies eighty miles south of [illegible], a town near the frontier of Uruguay and Brazil.

Employers Admit Defeat.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Each of the members of the Chicago Central Building League admits that the [illegible] lockout has failed. "The affair has proved a [illegible]," said D. V. Purington, the brick manufacturer, "and we are all willing to admit that the attempt to [illegible] has met with signal disaster. The [illegible] failed because it deserved to fail. It was wrong from the start." [illegible] taken back.

Damage Suit Against Dr. Keeley.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., April 14.—In the Leavenworth county district court [illegible] E. Johnson, of Topeka, filed a suit against Dr. Leslie E. Keeley, of Dwight, Ills., for $50,000 damages for [illegible]. Johnson alleges in his petition that he took the Keeley treatment for drunkenness at the Topeka institute in May, 1892, and that at the end of five weeks he was pronounced cured and sent away. He further claims that he is now incapacitated by [illegible] for any kind of work as a result of the treatment, that he cannot live long, and that he still has an appetite for liquor.

TO COUNT A QUORUM.

House Democrats Indorse the Tactics of Ex-Speaker Reed.

ABSENTEES WILL NOT BE PAID.

Congressmen Will Not Hereafter Draw Their Full Salaries While on Stumping Tours in the Interest of Political Parties—Sickness the Only Excuse.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—After a heated session of two hours and a half the Democratic caucus yesterday afternoon decided, by a vote of [illegible], to instruct the committee on rules to report a new rule to ascertain and record the presence of a quorum whether voting or not. This is the culmination of the long and bitter struggle that has been on in the Democratic house ever since the end of the Fifty-first congress.

When the committee on rules on Thursday brought forward the proposition to punish members who declined to answer to their names on roll calls by the imposition of a $10 fine for each offense as the solution of the situation with which the house has been frequently confronted when it was deadlocked by the refusal of the Republicans to respond to their names, a great deal of opposition was manifested on the part of various Democrats. Some of them did not believe that such a method would prove effective, and insisted that the house should go further than the committee on rules seemed to do and adopt the quorum counting device invented by Mr. Reed in the Fifty-first congress.

Others were not disposed to go even as far as the rule framed on Thursday contemplated. The result was that when the Democrats were without a quorum yesterday it was decided to hold a caucus to discuss and agree upon some plan. Practically all the Democratic members of the house attended the caucus. As soon as it was called to order Mr. Bland presented a resolution directing the sergeant-at-arms to carry out the provision of Section 40, Chapter 3, of the revised statutes, by which deductions from the salaries of the members should be made for every day's absence, except on account of sickness. This was in accordance with the action of the judiciary committee earlier in the day. After the members of the judiciary committee had made their explanation the resolution was unanimously adopted.

Then followed the fight over the question of [illegible] by which those members who refuse to answer to their names should be made to participate in legislation. Several propositions were submitted. The resolution which embodied the rule reported from the committee on rules yesterday, however, was not one of them.

The debate upon various propositions continued for two hours and developed a wide difference of opinion. Speaker Crisp took the floor and made a vigorous speech, pointing out the deplorable position in which the house found itself on account of continued and persistent obstruction. It left the house at the mercy of the minority whenever at a wink or nod from Mr. Reed the Republicans declined to answer to their names.

Quite a number of speeches were made in opposition to any and all rules looking to the counting of members who refused to vote. During the course of a rather hot-tempered speech from Mr. Kilgore on the subject, Mr. Bland shouted, with an expression of disgust [illegible] to the effect that if a Democratic house was forced to resort to Reedism they had better adjourn sine die and go home. Mr. Cummings [illegible] the proposition [illegible]. "A rule to nominate Thomas B. Reed for president of the United States."

After [illegible] Mr. De Armond, of Missouri, [illegible] offered [illegible] Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky, [illegible] Mr. De Armond's [illegible] was carried by a vote [illegible].

It has been [illegible] adopted at a party caucus, although the proceedings [illegible] are kept secret or at least are presumed to be so, but after the adoption of the De Armond resolution another resolution was prepared, submitted and carried to suppress entirely the proceedings of the caucus. It remains now for the committee on rules to formulate a rule in accordance with the De Armond resolution. [illegible]

McGOVERN'S QUEER FIND.

A Chicago Policeman Discovers a "What Is It" From the World's Fair In a Sewer.

While at work in a connection of the city sewer at Woodlawn police station City Police Plumber Pat McGovern captured a queer animal which is not altogether beast or fish. It is 9 inches long, has a head like an alligator, with short feet and a tadpole tail.

McGovern thinks it is one of the World's fair aquarium exhibits which escaped from the Fisheries building last summer when a section of glass was accidentally broken. It was put on exhibition in a bucket of water at the police station, where scores of persons went to see it. The "what is it" wriggled around in the bucket all day, to the great delight of McGovern and Lieutenant Larkin.

McGovern was at work in the sewer under the station when he saw something that looked like a fish drop out of the pipe and fall at his feet. He is not a drinking man, and he says it is a good thing he is abstemious in his habits. At first he was frightened at the hideous looking object, but it was only for a moment. He held his light close down to the strange animal and saw that it had feet. It was of a greenish color, and McGovern's first impression was that it was some species of reptile.

He clambered out of the hole and went to Lieutenant Larkin's office to tell him of his find.

"Oh, I see," said the lieutenant, "you've been drinking again. The next thing you'll be finding white elephants in the sewer."

"I'm not a drinking man," said McGovern, "and I only ask you to come and see for yourself. It is neither fish, beast nor reptile, and who knows but it may be the missing link that scientists have long been looking for?"

The lieutenant accompanied McGovern to where the strange object was lying. When he saw it, he was convinced that the plumber had not been dreaming or drinking. A pail was brought from the storeroom and into it was shoveled McGovern's find. The news soon spread through Woodlawn, and there was a stream of persons going in and out of the station all day.—Chicago Herald.

HANDY FOR FORGERS.

A Prussian Invents a Kind of Paper Which Can Be Used For Nefarious Purposes.

A Prussian named Lenz has invented a writing paper which will be heard of in the criminal courts before long. It is of the same appearance as any other writing material, but a discovery as to its properties has caused the German government to declare its manufacture illegal, and a patent has been refused. It is composed of parchment, glue, asbestos and the ordinary ingredients used in the manufacture of fine paper, such as is used for checks, bonds and certificates of stock. The moist sheets immediately after leaving the rollers for the first time are placed in a bath of concentrated sulphuric acid, to which distilled water has been added.

After having been pressed between glass rollers the sheets are successively bathed in pure water, a solution of ammonia and finally in water again. The process is completed by hand pressing, passing through felt rollers and drying between polished and heated metal cylinders. The peculiarity of this innocent looking paper is that writing, no matter how indelible the ink, can be readily washed off with water after any length of time. Such material would be dangerous in the hands of forgers. Although prohibited by the German government, quantities of this paper will no doubt be manufactured for nefarious purposes.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Baltimore's Cocoanut Tree.

The cocoanut tree in the palmhouse at Druid Hill park has attained a height of over 30 feet, and it has become necessary to guy it with strong wire rope. In a year or two it will have to be cut off. It is a graceful tree. Mr. W. D. Hamilton, the gardener at Druid Hill park, raised it. Fourteen years ago he planted a cocoanut at Patterson park, which in a month or two sprouted and grew. Three years ago, when the tree was 23 feet high, Mr. Hamilton planted it in mulch and in its present position. It is said to be the largest artificially grown cocoanut tree in the United States. A date palm planted in the earth near the cocoanut tree has been [illegible] feet long and [illegible]. It is a magnificent [illegible] the [illegible]. It has only been [illegible] two years.—Baltimore News.

The Bottom of His Tunnel Fell Out.

Joseph Smith, a miner, had a narrow escape from death some days ago. He was at work in the bottom of a shaft, and at the depth of 43 feet from the surface his pick struck through into an old drift or cave. Smith had barely time to drop his tools, climb the rope and signal to his partner on the surface when the entire bottom dropped out of the shaft. It is not positively known how deep the old excavation is. A bucket was lowered over 40 feet from the spot where the cave took place without touching bottom.—Folsom (Cal.) Telegram.

Bull Fighting In France.

Bull fighting has invaded France. One of the chief elements at Easter Monday at Bayonne was the so called sport of the Spanish arena, in which five bulls were killed. Many English visitors from Biarritz, [illegible] to a favorable watching place, attended, but most of them left in disgust after the first animal was killed. Now they are writing to the London newspapers complaining of the barbarity of the sport.

Women to Vaccinate Women.

Health Commissioner Emery of Brooklyn has appointed Drs. Susan R. Pray, Agnes Sparks and Anna M. Stearns temporary vaccinators for the girls' high school and the grammar schools. These appointments were made in consequence of the objections of some of the pupils to vaccination by male vaccinators.

A NEGRO PLAYS SPOOK.

Middlepoint Residents Lay the Ghost Which Has Disturbed Them.

It turns out that the spook that has been making life a burden for the citizens of Middlepoint, O., and the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad men is a human being, and a colored person at that. The citizens of that place were determined to solve the mystery, and a reward of $30 was offered to any one who would spend a night at the water station and capture the ghostly specter. Failing to find any one who would undertake the task, they appointed a committee to investigate.

Thursday night the committee, which was composed of three men, two shotguns, one revolver and a brace of bulldogs, started for the water station and secreted themselves in the pumphouse. They watched in silence until about 11 o'clock, when a man was seen making his way across a field to the station. He ensconced himself behind the water tank and prepared for his work by placing a sheet over his head and a football that had been painted white in his left hand. He had not long to wait for a victim. A young man was returning from a spelling match with his best girl, and when they were within 50 feet of the station the spook noiselessly made its way to the railroad and stationed itself between the rails. The sight of the specter was too much for the young man's nerves, and he made a break across the field, leaving the young lady to look out for herself.

At this point the committee swooped down upon the spook and captured it after a chase of half a mile. The sheet was removed, and the spook was recognized as George Bartley, a colored man. The committee started back to town with their prisoner, two of them carrying the arsenal and the third leading the captured spook. Before reaching town Bartley succeeded in breaking away from his captors and started for the woods. Several shots were fired after him. It is not known whether they took effect, as after reaching the woods he gave his pursuers the slip. The committee returned to town and reported their capture. Some of the citizens are in doubt about the capture, but the story is generally believed, as the committee have in their possession a sheet and a white football as evidence.—Lima Special.

SPOON GUESSING CONTEST.

The Latest Thing In Social Pastimes Bears Heavily Upon the Hotels.

A guest at the Stillman arose from the dinner table. As he walked away one of the waiters called the manager, and the manager approached the stranger, saying, "I am sorry, sir, but you will have to return that spoon you have in your vest pocket."

The gentleman was very indignant and replied: "You are making a great fuss about a little thing. The spoon isn't valuable anyhow. Here it is."

The head keeper remarked that the spoon is solid silver, and that it is of some consequence whether guests pocket them after their meals. The stranger explained that he purloined the article, "not because I wanted to steal it, I assure you," he said. "Perhaps you haven't heard anything about the latest new game called the spoon guessing contest. Souvenir spoons have had their day, and the latest fad is to collect spoons from the big hotels in different parts of the country. Unless a hostess is able to entertain her guests with the new game, she might as well be out of the world."

The man then explained that there are a number of families in the city who have magnificent collections of hotel spoons, that the new game was a sort of progressive guessing contest. A spoon is held up in the air, and all the participants in the contest are supposed to guess the name of the hotel engraved upon it. The person guessing it is awarded a prize, and those who fail to get the right name of the hotel take a step backward.

The manager of the hotel thought the game a very interesting one to the participants, but not quite as entertaining to the hotel keepers who are obliged to furnish the spoons for the contest. It was an eye opener for him, however, for during the last month or so quite a number of spoons have disappeared mysteriously from the dining room table, and he had been unable up to that time to account for it.—Cleveland World.

One of the Queer Ways.

Englishmen have queer ways sometimes of manifesting admiration for heroism and self sacrifice. Six years ago Alice Ayres, a London servant, saved three of her master's children from a burning house. She herself perished in the flames. A popular fund placed an expensive monument over her grave and hung a painting of the scene of the rescue in the Red Cross hall. The mother of the girl, aged 72 years, whose only support was her daughter, was admitted the other day to the [illegible] workhouse and is now engaged [illegible] scrubbing floors and washing.—New York Sun's London Letter.

Locusts Getting Ready For Business.

The New York Sun printed an article a short time ago setting forth various predictions that the 17 year locusts would appear this spring in great numbers in the Hudson river valley, western Connecticut and northern New Jersey. Recent digging in the neighborhood of Nyack, it is said, reveals the presence of thousands of the larvae of the insect getting ready for their march [illegible], which generally takes place in this latitude early in June. The insects are now found at an average depth of four feet.

New Treatment For Consumption.

The only matter of wide popular interest in the recent medical congress at Rome was a paper yesterday by Dr. [illegible], the Italian delegate, offering a new treatment for consumption. He affirmed that he had cured 30 cases of genuine pulmonary tuberculosis by constant inhalation of the essence of mint and the external use of creosote and the essence of mint in an alcoholic solution.

IT'S A MILLSTONE

About a young man's neck to be a sufferer from nervous exhaustion, nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and the thousand and one derangements of mind and body that result from, unnatural, pernicious habits, contracted through ignorance. Such habits result in loss of manly power, wreck the constitution and sometimes produce softening of the brain, epilepsy, paralysis, and even dread insanity.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases. This book will be sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents in stamps, for postage. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1894.

For the first three months of this year the number of immigrants landed in New York, was 17,767 less than last year. Ocean steamship lines report that their sales of tickets to immigrants are sixty per cent. less than they were at this time last year. It looks very much as if the immigration problem was solving itself, for the time, at least.

Henry Clews, in his fine social letter, says there is some tendency toward a renewal of exports of gold. The condition of international balances is not, however, likely to admit of any important movement of the precious metal, and should the outflow be greater than is anticipated it would have no effect on our present over-glutted money market, while by making money cheaper abroad it would tend to create a foreign demand for American securities.

A fifteen-year-old Albany boy stole a ham from a grocer to give to a woman who was very poor. She was not at home when he went to give her the ham, and so he returned it to the grocer who had him locked up. The boy when arraigned could not be made to admit that he had done anything wrong and was finally discharged. A stranger combination of kindness of heart and an inability to recognize the distinctions of meum and tuum, of right instincts in one direction and wrong instincts in another, was never before made part of a police court record.

A decision of Judge Shiras, of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Iowa, in a suit against the Chicago and Northwestern, that a written agreement of settlement of a claim for personal damages may be set aside and a suit for damages maintained provided the money received in settlement is paid back, is of interest and importance not only to the railroads but also to the general public. If the decision is sustained by the higher courts, railroads will be likely to discharge their claim agents who are now kept busy settling claims for, if these settlements are not final and conclusive and binding on both parties, they serve no useful purpose. Carried to its legitimate conclusion Judge Shiras's decision means that the only settlement of a personal damage claim against a railroad that will stand is one made in open court, by judge and jury.

By merest chance, a bomb, which had been placed on the porch of the residence of William Strange, a wealthy silk manufacturer of Paterson, was discovered, last night. The discovery was made barely in time to prevent the killing and maiming of Mr. Strange and his family, for the fuse attached to it had burned within an inch of the explosive. Mr. Strange is president of the association of manufacturers, which is resisting the demands of the dyers and weavers for better wages and it seems certain that some of the strikers, among whom there is a large foreign element, having been inflamed by the incendiary harangues of socialist and anarchist leaders, came to the point of believing that they would promote their own interests and do humanity service by "removing" Mr. Strange. The sympathy of the people of Paterson has been with the strikers in their efforts to secure living wages, but this mad and cowardly attempt at murder has done the cause of the strikers lcmate harm.

POLLARD VS. BRECKINRIDGE.

Judge Bradley's Charge—Holds That There Was a Contract of Marriage.

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—This was the last day of the Breckinridge trial. Judge Wilson concluded his address for plaintiff, and the Court charged the jury.

Judge Bradley, in his charge, said that Breckinridge's secret marriage was no defense for this action, for it does not release Breckinridge from any of his promises.

The Judge said that the jury must believe from all evidence that a contract was entered into by both parties by which they agreed with each other to become husband and wife.

3 o'clock.—The Breckinridge jury has retired and is now out.

BEFORE THE RECORDER.

A Fighting Drunk from Port Jervis—John Smith Again Goes Wrong

It took two policemen and three or four citizens to land Walter Palmer, a brakeman from Port Jervis, in the lockup, last night. Palmer, who is undersized but wiry, was found in an advanced stage of intoxication by Officer Vail and made no resistance until just as he was about to be placed in a cell. Then he commenced to fight, and before he was finally caged he had sprained Sergeant White's finger and his own clothes were considerably torn. He pleaded guilty to the charge of intoxication, this morning, and was sentenced to pay $10 or ten days in Goshen jail.

John Smith, an aged colored pensioner and an old offender, was also fined $10 or thirty days in Goshen jail.

John is one of the most inoffensive looking men in the world when sober and is always polite and gentlemanly. He has not been in the toils for about nine months until, yesterday, when a friend called at his house and sent him up town to buy a bottle of whiskey. John managed to get rid of the larger portion of it before he returned to his home, and the friend sent him a second time "and he never came back." His explanations and excuses in court, this morning, provoked much laughter.

TANGLED IN THE CAR TRACKS.

A Wheel of One Wagon Broken and the Axle of Another Sprung.

This morning, while L. D. Cox was driving through Depot street, with a load of milk, he attempted to turn out of the car tracks, but not having learned how to do it, he twisted a wheel off his wagon.

Mr. Cox placed his milk in the wagon of another farmer, who was on his way to the condensery and the latter got tangled up in the car tracks on James street and sprung an axle of his wagon quite badly.

The secret of such accidents is that but very few wagons in this city or vicinity will track in the girder rails and the sooner people find it out, the better. The safest plan is to "straddle" the rails.

Location of the Fire.

WHICH?
The Greater Curiosity,
The Alligator Boy
or
Children's Suits at $2 each?

Both are wonderful, but we are of the opinion that the children's suits are vastly of more importance to you, when they can be had at two dollars a suit, that is, if you have a child or children to clothe.

The suits are warranted and are all well made, stylish cut and of the latest goods. When you stop to see the Alligator Boy, step in and ask to see the suits.

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Closing Session Yesterday—Superintendent Crooker's Address—Good Counsel from Prof. Sanford—Commendation for Commissioner Clark.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Commissioner Clark in a few words introduced State Superintendent Crooker.

Supt. Crooker began by describing the discouragement attending the beginning of a teacher's work and illustrated by giving some of his early experiences in a district school. He spoke of the wonderful improvement in the work done by teachers and made the statement that it was becoming one of the foremost professions.

Superintendent Crooker read an address. He gave a brief summary of the advancement of learning. This age is one of advancement; there is a demand for learning and the world looks to the teacher for advancement. His work is not appreciated, and the importance of it is overlooked; therefore the teacher should be aggressive in order to impress his value upon the community. People must be brought to see that teachers are the most poorly paid of any profession.

Teachers should aim to be highly qualified and impress their value upon the world.

One of the most demoralizing influences at work is the parsimony and indifference of Boards of Education; they do not pay good teachers enough and show their indifference by employing poorly qualified teachers. This is a world of advancement and the teacher must stand at the front in this onward march.

The true testimonial of the teacher is his work and his work is most advertised by the fruits of his work in better lives and increased usefulness.

This is an age of advertisement. No place is too sacred for this. All professions do this and every one is expected to advertise their business and the school should be no exception, but not in the way of the patent medicine man. The pupil must be the eloquent, constant, and unfailing advertisement of the teacher. This consists of refining influences and better lives. The teacher is the artificer of the nation and the foundation must be well laid. This is done mostly in the secondary schools. The district school is the basis of our civilization, not the high school or college, and it is the duty of the State to foster them. It is here that ninety per cent. of all our children receive their education, and they should receive abundant State aid.

The careless and indifferent teachers are the stumbling block to the school system, not the poorly prepared one. The teacher must be progressive, constantly striving to improve and increase their usefulness, and this means an increase in the teacher's compensation.

We demand the services of the best physician, lawyer and horse trainer, and pay them liberally. Why not the teacher? Supt. Crooker stated that if he had the fixing of teachers' salaries he would make the minimum $10 per week.

The teachers should make the school house attractive, and in this way truancy can be largely overcome.

The true teacher is a model of manhood, and his example should be a force in the community. He cannot afford to neglect the smallest detail. A teacher's influence, whether for good or evil, does not end with the school, but goes on for all time, and in this influence consists the true value of the teacher.

At the close of Supt. Crooker's address, Prof. Sanford spoke of the work of Supt. Crooker and the high standing to which he has brought the department.

After recess, Prof Sanford, after a few words, in which he referred to his services to education in Middletown and Orange county, introduced ex Commissioner Case, who made an address, which was full of sound advice and encouragement to the assembled teachers. At the close of the address Prof. Sanford announced that owing to the fact that there were ties for all the prizes in the spelling contest, he would refer the decision to the agent of the American Book Company, who was to give the prizes.

Prof. Sanford then took up the question box and brought out the following points:

The legal school day is six hours, and a teacher can be obliged to teach this time.

Suspension from school rests in the hands of the Trustees or Boards of Education, and can only continue until the removal of the cause for suspension.

In regard to keeping children after school there is no rule of the State Department' but the less you have of it the better it is for the teachers and pupils.

In regard to written explanations in arithmetic, teachers should not make too great a use of this, but oral ones should be called for most frequently.

It should be the effort of every teacher to work into a graded system even in our small schools.

A teacher ought to be willing to give instruction on any subject he can, even if it takes time.

Do not punish for personal immorality; use moral suasion and sympathy.

The teacher should labor constantly to break up the habit of bad reading by personal influence and giving the pupil something good to read.

At the close of this period Prof. Sanford addressed a few words to the teachers, regretting the fact that his work was so interupted by his illness, and referring pleasantly to his meeting with so many of his former pupils and expressed his thanks to the commissioner for his efficient management of the Institute, and the teachers for their attention.

This closed the Institute, which, despite the fact that the weather for two days was about as bad as could be, was one of unusual interest from the instruction given. Prof. Sanford and his assistants did work which will leave a lasting impression on the minds of those who were fortunate enough to hear him.

One idea which was constantly brought out by all the speakers might be taken as the keynote of modern educational thought and progress, and that is the manhood and womanhood of teachers, as an indispensible qualification to success, and the fact that the teacher has duties as a social being, and that the teaching must be directed as much to the hearts as to the heads, and that the true value of the teacher consists more even in bettered lives than stimulated intellects. Another item which should be impressed deep in the minds of all is that the common school is the pupil's school, and that ninety per cent of our coming citizens will be indebted to the common school for all their education and many of them for their moral training as well.

Too much can not be said of the efficiency of Commission Clark; ever courteous and pleasant, his institutes like his district are models to the State, and every teacher in his district recognizes that in him is a head of the schools who is ever in full sympathy with them and ever striving for their improvement and that of the schools.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Thos. Neville Gets a Verdict Against Peter Farnum—Redner vs. the Lehigh and Hudson—Settlement of a Suit by the Central

The case of Thomas Neville vs. Peter Farnum, President of the Port Jervis Water Company, was tried before Justice Brown and a jury, Thursday afternoon. The plaintiff was a sub-contractor and did work on the Port Jervis water works. The contractor left town suddenly and left bills unpaid. Neville claimed that Mr. Farnum hired his teams, and he sued to recover for their services. Friday morning the jury handed in a sealed verdict, in which the plaintiff was awarded $216.

The case of James H. Redner, of the town of Warwick, vs. the Lehigh and Hudson Railway Company, was called, Friday morning, and tried before a jury. As soon as the trial was commenced, Justice Brown stated that all other petit jurors would be excused until next Monday morning, at 10 o'clock, as no other case would be called for trial for Saturday. The action was brought to recover damages for the loss of the services of the plaintiff's wife, resulting from injuries she was alleged to have received in falling four feet from an imperfect railroad station platform. The station referred to is Hudson Junction where the depot building is owned by the Orange County Railroad Company. Effie Redner, the wife of the plaintiff, had a suit against the L. and H. She won a verdict for personal injuries nearly a year ago, in the Supreme Court, but the company appealed. Her suit has not yet been decided on appeal.

The suit of Mr. Redner is separate and distinct from his wife's. In both suits the L. and H. people set up the claim that they were not required to keep the station or its platform in order or to pay for damages if they did not.

A verdict of no cause of action was rendered in the case of Atwood vs. Bierne.

The case of Andrew P. O'Brien vs. the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company, which was to have been tried before Justice Brown this week, has been settled. The action was brought for $25,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received by the plaintiff, in the West Shore wreck at Newburgh. It is understood that the plaintiff received about $10,000.

The Pink Tea at Mrs. Merritt's.

The pink tea and maple wax sociable, given by the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's M. E. Church, at the residence of Mrs. Alex. Merritt, last evening, was a successful affair. The attendance was large and all spent a pleasant evening. There was a musical entertainment which was well received by the audience.

The financial results were entirely satisfactory.

INCIDENTS AND HAPPENINGS IN GOSHEN.

Firemen Ready to Respond to Monroe's Appeal for Help—Robinson's Band to Give a Concert—Personal and Local Notes.

From our regular correspondent.

—About 8:45 last night President Hock received the following telegram from Monroe:

Please send the fire engine down. Stables attached to Rogers's hotel on fire. Bad. MONROE.

President Hock immediately gave the alarm and in less than ten minutes the fire companies were at the depot and ready to again go to the assistance of our neighboring village; but just as they were about to load the engine, a second telegram was received announcing that the fire was under control and that the services of the Goshen firemen were not needed.

—Some half a dozen of our public spirited citizens have clubbed together and will secure the services of Robinson's Military Band of Paterson to give a two-hour concert, some night during the summer.

—"Chick" Scott is still on the sick list, but is somewhat improved to-day.

—Geo. Peck will move out of Miss Mary Murray's house, about May 1st.

—John Rigney, of New York, is visiting in town.

—Wm. Hoffman is quite ill with a severe attack of pneumonia.

—Ex-Senator and Mrs. W. P. Richardson returned, last evening, from a trip through the South.

—Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bedell and family are spending a few days in Poughkeepsie with relatives.

—John Van Dyke died, yesterday, of heart trouble, aged eighteen years. Funeral, to-morrow afternoon, at the A. U. P. Church.

—The fire alarm, last night, stirred the boys up somewhat. The were getting rusty for want of action. The Dikemans have not been out for over a year.

IN ANCIENT GOSHEN

Different Comings and Goings Personal and Local Notes—A New Industry for the Support of Man.

From a special correspondent

—Hon. Henry Bacon returned, on Monday, from Jacksonville, Fla., where he had been spending the three weeks previous.

—Mrs. Russell Strait, of Bradford, Pa., is visiting at the home of her parents, in this village.

—The report, published in some of the papers, that Surrogate Coleman had suffered a relapse, proved to be without foundation. He is reported as doing well.

—Rev. R. B. Clark will preach at Warwick, to-morrow.

—At a vestry meeting held in St. James's Church, last Monday, A. S. Murray was elected Treasurer in place of William T. Russell, resigned. Oliver Tuthill was appointed Clerk in place of Henry C. Payne.

—The Goshen firemen were called upon, last evening, to go to the assistance of the Monroe people.

—Much has been said and written of late concerning woman's usurpation of man's rights in the way of earning a living and perhaps this is the reason of a development of a new industry for men by which they not only contrive to get rid of not a few of the opposite sex, but make "the deep damnation of their taking off" profitable to themselves. We refer to the habit that many men have fallen into, (if we are to believe an article published in a recent issue of a reliable paper, that gravely makes the statement that the insurance companies dislike to take a risk on a woman's life, because so many have been murdered by male relatives in whose favor their lives had been insured.) of insuring their wives' lives, and then putting them out of the way with neatness and dispatch. If it could only be arranged in such a way that these modern Bluebeards should marry none but self-supporting wives, it might leave a wider field for man, and at the same time woman would be in her proper sphere of making herself useful to the other sex, never mind at what sacrifice to herself. It is a great deal easier to grumble at what is going on all over this big world of ours than it is to satisfactorily set matters straight in one small corner of it; and those who have been most emphatic upon the subject of woman's encroaching upon man's privileges, have as yet suggested no remedy for it. It is easier for almost any woman to sit with folded hands and be protected and supported, but if she be minus a protector and supporter, we ask with all the humility befitting our sex, must she stand aside and starve, for fear lest she be taking the bread from the mouth of some helpless man?

Drowned in a Wash Tub.

Coroner Decker was called to New Milford, in the town of Warwick, this afternoon, to hold an inquest on the body of the two-year-old child of George Conkling.

The little one was playing about the kitchen, in which was a wash tub filled with water, and while the mother was out of the room fell into the water and was drowned.

The Big Sale Recently Inaugurated

now "on the carpet." Three special items for morning sales, from 9 to 11 a. m., 2 cases Outing Flannels at 4½c., regular 8 cent goods; 2 cases Apron Ginghams at 4c., 2 cases Dress Ginghams at 5c., last week's price 8 cents.

The writer, in referring to the new sale, mentioned that old prices would prevail in carpets. It was not our intention to continue 59 cents for Lowells, 83 cents for ingrains and 87½ cents for Tapestry Brussels, but, as the mistake was made, prices will be "the SAME" until every yard is sold.

Our Wall Paper Business knows no limit; in other words, "WE ARE IN IT." Our new patterns now coming to hand.

Everybody ought to see our Silk and Dress Goods stock. Our new Taffetas, our new Indias, our new Moires and Moire Antiques. Our Silk and Wool Dress Goods, at 50 cents, new and popular.

Our new shoe man reports progress, and stock in good order.

Our syndicate has an outlet of $800,000.

We have been buying in Staple Cottons—10 cases and 10 bales at a purchase.

The writer is the buyer for this immense amount, and is in close touch with the manufacturers and their agents.

The volume of our big spring business exceeds by far last year's — and the stock and prices will be made still more popular, and the good work continues.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat these parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

Mr. Snoodle is an inveterate smoker and has a most reprehensible habit of smoking in bed, but Mrs. Snoodle, though she allows him to smoke anywhere else, very properly forbids him to indulge in such a dangerous practice. However, as Mrs. Snoodle is a remarkably sound sleeper Mr. Snoodle frequently manages to enjoy a few stolen whiffs.

One night when in bed Mr. Snoodle had an irresistible desire for a pipe, which he in vain endeavored to combat. His wife was fast asleep, so he cautiously stretched out his hand for his pipe, which lay on a little table by the bedside. Then with equal caution he filled it, lighted up and was puffing away with intense relish when Mrs. Snoodle turned over and gave two or three snorts.

"I believe she's going to wake up," thought Mr. Snoodle and hastily took his pipe from his mouth and placed it on the table.

Mrs. Snoodle gave a few more snorts and woke up. Then she gave a series a sniffs, and Mr. Snoodle trembled, for the room was pregnant with tobacco smoke.

"John, are you smoking?" asked his wife sternly.

"Certainly not, my dear. Whatever makes you think so?" he innocently inquired.

"Because I can smell tobacco," she replied. "Phew, how strong it is! Don't you smell it, John?"

"Can't say I do, Martha. I've got a bit of a cold."

"Open your eyes, man, and then you will," snapped Mrs. Snoodle.

"I don't smell with my eyes," giggled Mr. Snoodle.

"What I mean is wake up properly and sniff hard. Now, can't you smell it?"

"Well—er—I think there is a faint odor of tobacco," admitted the culprit.

"Think—faint odor! Why, the place reeks with it! I tell you what it is, John, there's somebody smoking in the house," declared his wife.

"Do you think Jane indulges in a pipe on the sly?" suggested Mr. Snoodle.

"Nonsense!"

"Well, my dear, the only other living thing in the house is the cat, and I never heard of cats smoking."

"Don't talk rubbish, John. It's a serious matter. It's my firm belief there's a burglar smoking in the house." And Mrs. Snoodle shivered.

"Ah, very likely," replied Mr. Snoodle, thankful for his lucky escape and preparing to go to sleep again.

"John, are you going to sleep and let the house be ransacked?" asked his wife indignantly.

"Certainly not, my dear."

"Then why don't you go down stairs and catch the burglar?"

Mr. Snoodle very reluctantly got out of the warm bed into the cold air, sleepily lighted a candle and moved toward the door.

"Aren't you going to take some weapon of defense?" asked his wife. "Do you want to be killed? I never saw such a man!"

Mr. Snoodle rather sulkily seized the poker and muttered that "if he found a burglar he'd make it smoking hot for him."

He had got half way down stairs and was thinking of anything but burglars when he suddenly saw a man dart out of the dining room and bolt down the kitchen stairs. Mr. Snoodle's first impulse was instant flight, for he was an arrant coward, but he was so astounded and petrified with fear that he was utterly unable to either move or speak. He simply stood still, holding the candle nearly upside down, with his mouth wide open. Then he heard the back door bang and knew that the burglar was gone, so thought it was about time for action and to earn a little cheap glory.

So he roared out: "You villains! I'll murder you! I'll scalp you as clean as a whistle!" and rushed down stairs. He had never before felt so heroic in his life. He bounded into the dining room and fought fiercely with the furniture, especially the fender, as he could bang into that without injuring it much until he was quite exhausted.

"John, John, come up stairs!" screamed Mrs. Snoodle. "You'll be killed!"

"It's all right, Martha!" shouted back Mr. Snoodle.

"Have you got the rascals safely bound then?"

"No, they've got away. But I've nearly killed 'em!"

"Thank heaven! Come up stairs and let me dress your wounds, dear," said Mrs. Snoodle solicitously.

Mr. Snoodle, after securing the back door, which the servant had omitted to lock, and unfolding the bundle of plate that the burglar had left behind in his haste to escape, went up stairs.

"Oh, John," exclaimed Mrs. Snoodle on [illegible] him, "then you're not dead?"

"No, dear," he said, mopping his brow, "but it was a terrible fight."

"I'm sure it was. I never heard such an awful noise. Did they take anything?"

"Only the [illegible]," groaned Mr. Snoodle. "I was just in time to prevent 'em carrying off the best part of our plate. It was all tied up ready. That idiot of a Jane forgot to lock the back door. I'll give it to her in the morning!"

"The silly girl! How many burglars were there, John?"

"Two. One great fellow over 6 feet, and another bigger, if anything, but I caught one a crack on the head that must have pretty well smashed it, and I'm sure I've broken the other one's leg," declared the mendacious Mr. Snoodle.

"Then I wonder he could run away," remarked his wife.

"He doesn't run with his arms, Martha."

"No, but you said you'd broken his leg, John."

"Oh, I meant arm."

"I suppose the place is covered with blood?" queried Mrs. Snoodle.

"No, they took that away with 'em—I mean they ran away so quickly that I don't think it had time to drop."

"I'm glad of that. I hope you haven't got any internal injuries, John?" asked Mrs. Snoodle anxiously.

"Well, dear," he laughed, "I have a strange empty feeling about the stomach, but I dare say a little whisky and water will put that all right."

"John," exclaimed his wife, gazing at him admiringly, "I never felt so proud of you as I do at this moment. Fancy you tackling two great burglars and putting them to flight without getting a scratch yourself! I always thought you were rather a coward. Forgive me, darling, for having thought so, for now I know you are the bravest of the brave!"

"I don't know about that, Martha, but I think I have my share of courage," said Mr. Snoodle modestly.

"You're a perfect hero!" exclaimed Mrs. Snoodle enthusiastically. "Would you not like a pipe, dearest? You haven't had a smoke since supper time, and I'm sure you deserve one after your terrible exertions. As you know, John, I never object to your smoking anywhere, except in bed. That I will not allow."

"Quite right, Martha. There's no telling what such a practice might lead to," remarked Mr. Snoodle thoughtfully, lighting his pipe.

"Fancy, John," said Mrs. Snoodle, "fancy me smelling those burglars smoking! What impudence they've got! However, if I hadn't smelled the smoke, we shouldn't have discovered the burglars. So we may say our property was saved by a pipe, may we not?"

"We may indeed, Martha," replied Mr. Snoodle, and he meant it.—London Tit-Bits.

Gold Digging.

Perhaps it was not an old "forty-niner" who gave the following description, but it was a man who knew the work in question. Like most enthusiasts, however, he underrates the trial and disappointment involved:

It's the prettiest work I ever did. It's the fascination of it, when you've struck it pretty rich and see your gold right in front of you, when you're piling it up every half hour of the day, with a nugget now and again as big as a bullet to cheer you.

And then when the evening comes and you count it up and find it a hundred odd dollars just picked out o' the earth that day—well, there's nothing like it!

Then when you don't strike it you always think you're going to next day, and it's just as exciting hearing other men tell in the evening what they've pulled out as it is counting over your own. Why, I've been three or four months at a time without making a dollar and without a cent in my pocket; but, gee whitaker, the excitement of it don't give a man time to think how hard up he is!—Youth's Companion.

A Creed of Love.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them and while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier by them. The kind things you mean to say when they are gone say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them. If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away full of fragrant perfumes of sympathy and affection which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary and troubled hours and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial. Post mortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way.—George W. Childs.

The Designing Woman.

It is true that we read a good deal about "the designing woman" in novels written by ladies. It gives them pleasure to describe these dexterous and wily creatures doing such mischief among the other sex. Mothers, too, believe that their pure and innocent sons are always in danger from these unprincipled young persons. And yet the fact is that at 37 none of them can hold a candle for evil intention to any ordinary youth of 17. The hypocrisy with which for their own ends men affect to fall in with the female view of flirtation and "the designing woman" is contemptible. Even the most impudent of them seldom venture to adopt it among themselves. The tongue in their cheek is too obvious.—James Payn in London Illustrated News.

Brain Restorers.

Milk and cheese have been placed in the list of brain restorers by members of the Paris Academy of Medicine. Experiments have shown that absolutely pure caseine contains 753 parts out of 1,000 of organic phosphorus. The welsh rabbit may now be eaten late at night with a clear conscience.—Kate Field's Washington.

TWIN EVILS.

Constipation is the parent of all evils and its twin disease is headache. Unless you correct this condition sickness is certain to result. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has cured thousands of persons after all else failed.

Mrs. D. Rugg, of Medusa, N. Y., thought there was no permanent cure until she used Favorite Remedy, of which she says: "For years I had been troubled with constipation. I tried many remedies, which gave only temporary relief. Last fall, I became so diseased that I had a severe attack of chills and colic; I then determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which gave me permanent relief, and I am better now than I have been in years."

Mrs. Orphia Burdick, of Otsego, N. Y., also writes: "Being a sufferer from sick headaches for years, I tried many remedies, and the only one that gave me permanent relief was Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy."

"ADAMANT" WALL PLASTER!

The New, Cheap Substitute for Common Plaster.

It is very hard and very adhesive; it does away with the warping and shrinkage of doors and casings, and the building is not saturated with water, as it necessarily must be when common plaster is used; it costs originally but little more than lime plaster, and in the end its superior qualities make it immeasurably cheaper; it saves waiting several weeks or months for the buildings to dry out; it does not crack or fall off, even in the case of leakage; it is applied easily by any good plasterer; it is the only material with which repairing can be done neatly and "to stay."

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kinchelos,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A DILEMMA.

The Key to the Situation Was Unfortunately Not to Be Had.

Herbert and Amelia were engaged to be married. They were seated alone one afternoon in the drawing room at her home awaiting the return of her parents, who had gone for a short stroll.

"Do you know, Amelia," he was saying, "I don't believe that the course of true love never does run smooth. In our case I am sure nothing has ever happened to cast the slightest shadow across the sunlit path of our mutual affection. Two hearts like ours—what is the matter?"

She was holding her pocket handkerchief to her nose.

"I'm afraid my nose is bleeding just a little. It sometimes does this hot weather. If you will excuse me, I'll retire."

"No, don't run away, darling. I'll stop it in a minute. A perfect cure. Here!"

He ran to the closed door to get the key from the lock. He turned it about, but it was some seconds before he could remove it.

"Ah, here it is!" he exclaimed at last.

"But what is the use of it?"

"Oh, I'll show you. The application of anything cold to the back of the neck has the effect of—of—well, I don't know exactly what it is that happens—it chills the blood, or stops the circulation, or something of the sort."

"Are you sure it is safe, Herbert?"

"Oh, perfectly. A fellow I know cured himself for life. No, I don't exactly mean that. Put it down the back of your neck. That's right."

"Ugh! How cold it feels!"

"Now hold your hands high above your head for a short time."

"Oh, Herbert!"

"What's the matter?"

"Oh, Herbert, I—I—it's slipped!"

"What?"

"There's some one at the door. Just see who it is."

Herbert went to the door, but found it would not open. He had inadvertently locked it when removing the key.

"[illegible]," he shouted. Then, turning to Amelia: "Just hand me the key a moment, dear."

"I told you. It's—it's gone!"

"Gone!" he gasped as he suddenly realized the awkwardness of the situation. "Can't I—that is to say, can't you get at it?"

"Open the door! Who is in there?"

"That is papa. Good gracious, what can I do? Why don't you speak to him?"

"Mr. Watkins, is that you?"

"Certainly it is, sir. Why in thunder don't you open the door?"

"I can't, sir."

"Can't? The key was on the inside, I know."

"Yes, but your daughter"—

"My daughter! Is Amelia in there?"

"Yes, sir"—

"Then open the door instantly, or I'll"—

"Pray be calm, sir."

"Be calm, indeed! Where is that key?"

"She—she swallowed it—no, I don't mean that. It's gone down"—

"Gone down? Where?"

"She put it down her throat—no, neck—and the back."

"Are you mad?"

"Her nose was bleeding—I mean her nose was bleeding, and I put the key in the neck of her back, and it slipped down."

But Amelia's father had gone, bent on putting some [illegible] into [illegible]. Her mother now came to the door.

"Oh, Amelia, what does it all mean? Where is the key?"

"I have it, mamma."

"Then why don't you open the door?"

"Because"—in a loud whisper through the keyhole—"because Herbert's here."

"Oh, the monster!"

"Amelia, for heaven's sake get that key!" pleaded Herbert.

"How can I?" she replied warmly, "unless you leave the room!"

"But I can't leave the room until you do. Stay! I'll draw down the blinds and go out on the balcony. Now, for goodness' sake be quick! But of course I give you my word of honor."

Poor Herbert had hardly stepped outside the window when he saw the massive form of Mr. Watkins, irate, at the other end of the balcony. Escape was impossible, and he could not of course retreat into the drawing room.

"Ha! Now, sir," shouted the enraged father, "if you will just go back out of the public gaze we will settle this matter."

"Can't go in there, sir!"

"Can't, indeed!"

"No. Your d[illegible] daughter is [illegible]."

"What! You [illegible] scoundrel!"

Mr. Watkins [illegible] like a tiger at Herbert before the [illegible] man could get in one word of explanation, and the two were instantly engaged in a very desperate encounter on the first floor balcony, to the great excitement of the neighbors and people in the street.

Amelia's father was a powerful man and an experienced wrestler. He was more [illegible] with rage.

The struggle continued for some time, and it seemed as though one or the other would [illegible] over [illegible]. [illegible] the blind was [illegible] and the [illegible] appeared at the window, [illegible] the key [illegible] of the balcony [illegible].

A Pretty Time [illegible].

"If you wish to retain your situation, Mr. Pepper, it will be necessary to pay more attention to your personal appearance. You look as though you had not shaved for a week."

"But I am raising a beard, sir."

"That's no excuse, sir. You must do that sort of thing outside of business hours."—Life.

Cautious.

Elderly Gentleman (to little boy who is buying taffy)—My young friend, don't you think that instead of spending all the pennies you get it would be better to put some away for a rainy day?

Little Boy—Oh, no. What's the good of money on a rainy day? Ma never lets me out of the house.—Spare Moments.

SHOTS HERE AND THERE.

AN "ARGUS" MAN OFF DUTY AIMS AT SEVERAL SUBJECTS.

An Angel or a Goose—Ought to Visit Middletown—Woman Suffrage in Wyoming—A Resolution that Sounds Well but Means Nothing.

"Is it better to be a goose or an angel,—to be able to wade or to fly across North street?" was the question propounded by Prof. Wilson, of Chester, yesterday afternoon, as he gazed on the ocean of nasty mud that flowed between him and the opposite sidewalk that he desired to reach.

A committee of Binghamton's Common Council is to visit a number of cities and inspect pavements. I notice that Middletown is not on the list of places which it is proposed to visit. This is a mistake. Middletown hasn't very many paved streets but it does claim the unenviable distinction of having the very worst paved street in these United States.

The Woman Suffragists want the people of this State, at this time when the agitation for the ballot for woman is in full swing, to read and ponder and profit by a resolution adopted last year by the Wyoming Legislature, which is as follows:

The possession and exercise of suffrage by the women in Wyoming for the past quarter of a century has wrought no harm, and has done great good in many ways; it has largely aided in banishing crime, pauperism and vice from this State; it has secured peaceful and orderly elections; and we point with pride to the facts that not one county in Wyoming has a poor house, and our jails are almost empty, and as the result of experience we urge every civilized community on earth to enfranchise its women without delay.

This sounds very well, and at first blush seems conclusive and convincing, but when analyzed the resolution is the merest buncombe. Every state and every nation that commits itself to any experiment in government can be depended on to assert that the results of the experiment are satisfactory, mark a distinct advance toward Utopia and bring the millenium a great deal nearer than ever it was before. That Wyoming jails are almost empty proves just as much in favor of woman suffrage as the oft repeated boast of Salt Lake City, when it was a distinctively Mormon colony, that it had no jail and no need of one, proved in behalf of the Mormon church. The jails in other new states of the far West are as empty as those of Wyoming, not because there is no crime in those states, but because in new and thinly settled communities laws are not enforced as they are in the older and more thickly inhabited parts of the country. So, too, in regard to poor houses. Pauperism is an incident of an old civilization and cannot exist in new countries where the demand for labor is so much in excess of the supply that wages for even the most unskilled laborer are far in excess of what skilled mechanics can earn where there are more workmen than there is work. Woman suffrage in Wyoming may be a most excellent thing, but its excellence is not proven by the absence of pauperism and crime in that state.

Rumors of a Divorce Suit at Bloomingburgh.

We understand that the gossips of Bloomingburgh and vicinity will soon have a sweet morsel to roll under their tongues, in the shape of a divorce suit, in which a well known resident will ask for the annulment of the ties that bind him to his wife. Unfortunately the couple have two small children.

Grace Church Parish Tea.

Another social gathering of the parishoners of Grace Church will be held on Monday evening next, at the Assembly Rooms, of the same character as the two which have already been held. An admirable entertainment has been provided, containing glees by the choir boys, part songs by ladies and gentlemen, and readings. Refreshments will be served by the Daughters of the King at a very reasonable price, and there will be no charge for admission.

Reception to a New Pastor.

The Ladies' Aid Society, of the M. E. Church, at Pine Bush, will give a reception and supper at the church, this evening, in honor of the new prstor, Rev. Arthur Jamison. The members of the church and congregation are invited to come out and meet the new minister.

Can This Be True?

We have been informed that the Republican hold-over carriers in the post-office have been measured for their summer uniforms. Republicans should wear citizen's clothing, this summer. Only Democrats should wear the uniform that Uncle Sam has prescribed for postal employes.

Bright Spring Days.

The spring should be pre-eminently a season of contentment, happiness and hope, In these bright and pleasant months the country should enjoy its highest degree of tranquility and prosperity. But spring, it is well known, is often a period of discomfort and disturbance in the physical system. Important organs of the body become torpid or irregular in their action, and the fact is instantly reflected in the mental condition of the individual. A disordered liver means disordered nerves and a dull unsteady brain. Anything which will bring the physical system into harmony with budding Nature confers an enormous benefit upon the nation, besides the mere allaying of physical discomfort. Hood's Sarsaparilla does this, as thousands of grateful and happy men and women can testify, and increased use of this standard spring medicine is of more real practical importance in promoting health and quiet in the business world than reams of abstract theorizing.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN MONROE.

Hotel Stables and Much of Their Contents Burned—The Work of an Incendiary—A Man Seriously Injured by Falling from a Ladder.

From our Monroe Correspondent.

The livery and exchange stables and shed belonging to the Monroe Hotel, and owned by Mr. J. T. Rogers, were totally destroyed by fire, last evening.

The fire was discovered about 8:30 o'clock, in a box stall in the basement, which contained about two tons of straw. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin, as the stall has been kept closed and locked, but after the fire was discovered the door was found to be open about six inches.

The horses and some of the wagons were saved, but four of his best wagons, his best sets of single and surrey harness, and all of the robes and blankets were burned, as was also coal, wood and potatoes that were stored in part of the building.

Mr. Rogers's loss is estimated at $4,000, insured for $1,000.

By the heroic work of the people the adjoining buildings were saved.

During the fire a ladder was put up at the hotel, and Reuben Fitzgerald and Ford Relyea ascended, and, when about half way up, the ladder gave way and the young men fell. Fitzgerald landed first, sustaining severe injuries. It was thought at one time that he could not survive, but later, after a thorough examination, it was found that he had received no fatal injury.

Mrs. Jenness Miller's Lecture.

Mrs. Miller's lecture, Tuesday, April 17th, at the Assembly Rooms, will be illustrated with the following changes of costumes: Dress embroidered by the Bulgarian women of Constantinople; school girl's correct gown; walking suit, tailor made; tea gown; carriage and calling dress; short rainy day dress; full evening dress, made in Paris, and many others. Tickets for sale at McMonagle & Rogers' and Olney's drug stores. Teachers' tickets at Olney's, half price, at Mrs. Miller's request.

The Seventeen-Year Locust Coming.

State Entomologist Lintner says the area of country to be visited by the seventeen-year locusts, next summer, has a northern limit in the vicinity of Schuylerville and Port Miller, in Saratoga and Washington counties, thence reaching south both sides of the Hudson, to its mouth, where it extends east at least to New Haven, in Connecticut, and west across the northern part of New Jersey and into Pennsylvania. The advance guard of the army may be looked for during the last days of May. It will be in full force about the middle of June, and will gradually diminish during the middle of the following month.

A FOUNTAIN FOR THRALL PARK.

A Design for a Firemen's Memorial on Exhibition.

The Park Commissioners have been looking into the matter of a suitable fountain for Thrall Park, and, this morning, an engraving of a handsome design was received, and is on exhibition at the cigar store of ex-Alderman A. J. Hornbeck. Is is called a "firemen's memorial," and represents a fireman in the act of rescuing a child. Its cost is estimated between $800 and $900.

If the Soldiers monument is to be moved to Thrall Park, what more suitable or appropriate design than a memorial to our firemen could be selected as a companion piece?

If the money cannot be procured from the city, why not start a popular subscription among the firemen and the friends of the department.

A Child Fatally Burned.

Daisy, the four-year-old daughter of J. Q. Barlow, of Rock Rift, was so badly burned, Wednesday afternoon, by her clothes catching fire that she died the next morning at 5 o'clock. Whether her clothing caught fire from a stove or she ignited it with a match that she found is not known.
